

Blue Dog Designs and Canine Rehabilitation Institute Announce the 2020 Winner of The Help ‘Em Out Contest for Veterinary Students

Congratulations to Brittany Weicht!

(April 2020) – Blue Dog Designs, makers of the Help ‘Em Up® Harness, in partnership with Canine Rehabilitation Institute (CRI), is pleased to announce the winner of the 2020 Help ‘Em Out Contest: Brittany Weicht, a third-year student at the Virginia-Maryland College of Veterinary medicine.

Entrants were asked to submit an essay explaining their interest in rehabilitation and what they hoped to accomplish in their career with the winner receiving free tuition to CRI's Introduction to Canine Rehabilitation module – a $2,900.00 value.

Brittany, a third-year student at the Virginia-Maryland College of Veterinary Medicine, said winning the contest was a humbling and exciting experience.

"I have had a special interest in physical rehabilitation since my first day in veterinary school, and now I have the opportunity to study with some of the best rehabilitation therapists in the world," she explained. "I cannot wait to start this journey and put my new skills into practice for the benefit of all my canine patients. I am very thankful to CRI and Blue Dog Designs for giving me this great opportunity."

CRI and Blue Dog Designs created the competition to help more veterinary professionals become certified in canine rehabilitation to meet growing demand in the field. As a result, the two have helped several deserving veterinary professionals start their careers in canine rehabilitation.

For more information on Blue Dog Designs and the Help ‘Em Up® Harness visit: www.helpemup.com

For more information on Canine Rehabilitation Institute visit: www.caninerehabinstitute.com

#